Small, patchy opaline resembling well-modelled clipping. Spanner, but differentiated by strong face pattern but lack of any local line, the loses a pale buffy color. The crown was brown with a white center stripe. The breast was a warm buffy color, the remaining underside white. The upperparts were a typical mottled brown. Photos are available and are much more definitive than this description.